The Reduction of Hours of Work

International Labour Conference

44th Session, 1960—Report VII (1)

A general report describing the law and practice relating to hours of work in various countries was discussed by the Conference at its 42nd Session, and a resolution was adopted by the Conference asking the Governing Body of the Office to place the question of the reduction of hours of work on the agenda of an early session of the Conference, not later than 1960, with a view to the adoption of an international instrument. The Governing Body subsequently placed the subject on the agenda for the 44th Session of the Conference. The Office has prepared a preliminary report reviewing the general situation with regard to hours of work as it was at the opening of the 42nd Session of the Conference, describing recent events and developments in many countries, and summarising the various attempts which have been made in the past to regulate hours of work at the international level. The report contains a questionnaire addressed to governments with a view to the drafting of new international standards.

Workers' Housing

International Labour Conference

44th Session, 1960—Report VIII (1)

The question of workers' housing has been placed on the agenda of the 44th Session of the Conference with a view to a general discussion and the possible adoption of an international instrument. If the Conference decides to treat the discussion at the 44th Session as a first discussion a second discussion will take place in the following year. With this in mind the report was drafted as a preliminary report describing the practice in various countries and contains a questionnaire asking for the observations of governments on points which might be included in a proposed international instrument.

African Labour Survey

Studies and Reports, New Series, No. 48

This survey of labour problems and policies in Africa covers the whole continent south of the Sahara. It is based on published and unpublished documentary sources and on information acquired by officials of the International Labour Office in the course of visits to the countries and territories concerned.

After describing the African background—climate, geography, population density, material resources, indigenous customs, historical development and present-day social conditions—the book deals in turn with agriculture, community development, manpower and employment, productivity, vocational training, freedom of association and industrial relations, wages, recruitment, contracts of employment and conditions of work, occupational safety and health, social security, housing, the co-operative movement, labour administration and inspection, and the application of internationally agreed labour standards. The last chapter contains the conclusions reached at the fifth and final session of the I.L.O. Committee of Experts on Social Policy in Non-Metropolitan Territories, which had before it a draft for the present volume.

The following documentation is provided in the appendices: standards and recommendations of the I.L.O. and other organisations; a reference list of labour legislation; statistical material, additional to that presented in the text, on various aspects of the social and economic situation, in tabular form; a bibliography giving the main recurring sources of information on Africa and the more important sources of background material; and an explanatory note on the Commission for Technical Co-operation in Africa South of the Sahara, the Inter-African Labour Institute and the Inter-African Labour Conference.
